SUBJECT: REQUEST FOR APPROVAL OF A NEW DEGREE PROGRAM - CIP 30.2001

PROPOSED Committee ACTION

Recommend re-approval of the following New Degree Program – CIP 30.2001

- Bachelor of Arts in Global Studies

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

The proposed Bachelor of Arts in Global Studies (CIP 30.201) is an interdisciplinary degree housed in the Dorothy F. Schmidt College of Arts and Letters at FAU. It consists of 120 total credit hours, including 44 credits needed to complete the degree requirements.

Those requirements include:

- 15 credits in core courses including four core courses (12 credits total) in Global Studies, methods and research design and one course (3 credits) in a directed undergraduate research project
- 8 credits of intermediate-level language courses
- 6 credits of 3000 level or above experiential learning courses either as study abroad or internship
- 15 courses of electives drawn from four categories of electives with thematic concentration areas in Global Cultures; Global Movements and Identities; Human and Natural Environments; and Peace, Social Justice, and Human Rights.

The Global Studies degree offers students a rigorous degree program that draws upon social science and humanities disciplines to better understand today's human, technological, social, and economic affairs and to acquire relevant skills for personal and professional success in a dynamically globalized world. Situated at the intersection of studies in culture, communication, politics, finance, economics, technology and human mobility, Global Studies offers holistic approaches to comprehending the geopolitical order as it evolves through increasing interconnectedness.

IMPLEMENTATION PLAN/DATE

Effective Spring 2025, pending approval by the Florida Atlantic University Board of Trustees.

FISCAL IMPLICATIONS

The only costs associated with the creation of degree are minimal and would only incur if the teaching of the 3 core courses of the degree created replacement needs for other courses. However, this should be mitigated by allowing the courses to count as electives in various majors. There are no additional expenses anticipated to develop and operate the program.

II. Institutional and State-Level Accountability

A. Describe how the proposed program directly or indirectly supports the following.

1. The State University System's Strategic Plan goals.
2. The institution's strategic plan and goals the program will directly advance.
3. The university's mission.
4. The benefit to the university, the local community, and the state.

SUS Goals

The proposed BA in Global Studies is fully aligned with the SUS's "2025 System Strategic Plan" adopted in October 2019. It strongly promotes 1) the planning goals of Excellence, Productivity and Strategic Priorities for a Knowledge Economy. A rigorous, well-delineated, globally-focused degree program provides Excellence, Productivity and Strategic Priorities in Teaching and Learning by ensuring the rigor of the program relative to the realities of an increasingly interconnected and competitive world.

Careers in the International Affairs/Relations and Global Studies are considered well-paying, high satisfaction occupations. Demand for these professionals is high, is expected to continue to grow, and will become even more desirable as the pace of global integration grows.

Indeed, the proposed degree directly addresses the State's priorities (2-5) to:

- Support students' development of the knowledge, skills, and aptitudes needed for success in the global society and marketplace.
- Transform and revitalize Florida's economy and society through research, creativity, discovery, and innovation.
- Mobilize resources to address the significant challenges and opportunities facing Florida's citizens, communities, regions, the state, and beyond.
- Deliver knowledge to advance the health, welfare, cultural enrichment, and economy through community and business engagement and service.

The degree under consideration addresses the SUS Strategic Plan goals by emphasizing the importance of an education that best prepares students for the opportunities and challenges of a global society. The SUS plan states that "The mission of the State University System of Florida is to provide undergraduate, graduate and professional education, research, and public service of the highest quality through a coordinated system of institutions of higher learning, each with its own mission and collectively dedicated to serving the needs of a diverse state and global society” and to “support students’ development of the knowledge, skills, and aptitudes needed for success in the global society and marketplace.”

The BA in Global Studies contributes to these goals by centering a student's educational experience on the emergent phenomenon of living in an increasingly globalized world. The degree facilitates student awareness of the challenges and opportunities inherent in cross-cultural contact, and ways that contact is central to individual and organizational success. The degree would directly address the goal of creating a strong talent pipeline capable of diversifying Florida’s economy. Through internships and study abroad experience the degree ensures that students are connected to employers and, in turn, that the employers will find them capable and trained with the relevant skills for their positions.

The BOG strategic plan calls for the development of degrees in Areas of Strategic Emphasis, a category that includes International/Global Studies (CIP 30.2001). This degree will be a new degree program located in an Area of Strategic Emphasis and will directly support the BOG Strategic Plan by attracting students to a forward-looking degree option.

Institutional Mission

The degree embraces the core values of FAU’s strategic mission to focus on outcome-based approaches that “equips students with essential tools to achieve economic success, personal well-being and meaningful careers” by adopting an interdisciplinary based approach to the degree. This decision prioritizes the relevance of information and skills over the sheer maintenance of a like-minded disciplinary reproduction. In addition, the focus on experiential courses, specified IFP courses, and core course design were all constructed with an eye to providing the student with the full range of aptitudes and skills they would need to thrive in these complex environments.

Institutional Strategic Plan

The proposed degree aligns with and responds to our institution’s goal of “Boldness” in that it specifically seeks to realize that goal’s vision of “a globalized, forward-thinking institution that caters to high-ability students” (p.6). So central was this goal to the plan that it was also established as the university platform of “Global perspectives and participation”. The degree is at the heart of these objectives insofar as it directly addresses the aim of making our students more career ready for the new global environment and in providing the skills essential to be leaders in that economy.

The degree design also embraces the platform of “undergraduate research” through its requirement that students complete a directed independent research project. As well, the nature of the Global Studies degree satisfies the “Community Engagement and Economic Development” platform in that it transforms more general humanities and social science majors into specific career/workforce readiness outcomes and provides graduates with detailed awareness of the communities they anticipate working within.

- B. Provide the date the pre-proposal was presented to the Council of Academic Vice Presidents Academic Program Coordination (CAVP ACG). Specify any concerns raised and provide a narrative explaining how each has been addressed in this proposal or will be addressed before the proposed program is implemented.

On April 3, 2020, Dr. Russ Ivy presented the pre-proposal of the new degree to the CAVP AG. There were no concerns.

III. Student and Workforce Demand

If the proposed program is a baccalaureate or master's degree on the Programs of Strategic Emphasis list, skip III-A.

- A. Describe the Florida and national workforce demand for the proposed program. The response should, at a minimum, include the current state workforce data from Florida's Department of Commerce and national workforce data from the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics. Additional documentation for workforce needs may include letters of program support by employers and job postings for program graduates, as well as a description of any specific needs for research and service that the program would fulfill.

The nature of a Global Studies degree is that it prepares students for any number of possible career paths including education, trade, finance, hospitality, governmental service, and industry. Florida Department of Economic Opportunity show robust employment demand through 2030 for all of these employment categories. A sampling of these numbers suggests strong demand for students graduating with a BA in Global Studies, including: Operations Research Analyst (23% expected growth), Market Research Analyst (22% expected growth), Financial Managers (18%), Management Analyst (15%), Marketing Managers (12%), Supervisor of Personal Services Workers (12%), Educational Services Providers (13%), Specialty Trade Contractors (12%), Professional, Scientific and Technical Services (19%), Government worker (5%), and Leisure and Hospitality Industries (11%).

A 2021 Florida Chamber Foundation study of workforce needs identified “Business/Finance” as one of the four principle areas of workforce need in the future (<https://www.flchamber.com/floridaworkforceneedsstudy>). With job outcomes like international trade specialist, market analyst, marketing manager, policy analyst and foreign affairs expert a degree in Global Studies prepares students for the complex and inter-connected workforce needs of the next century. Capacities learned in Global Studies degrees are essential other workforce needs including health care advocacy, fundraiser and non-profit management for health care industries. Finally, the skills acquired through a Global Studies degree can be essential in supplementing the humanities and social science service-oriented professions toward the positions where workforce demand is at its highest. By ensuring a pipeline of graduates with a set of essential language, analytical, research, communication, skills, and intercultural awareness the degree will help move Florida’s workforce in better alignment with anticipated position needs.

The Florida Chamber of Commerce also highlights Florida’s significant global influence and inter-connection to countries across the world. It is the 17th largest global market with exports, imports, service exports, visitors and investment spanning the globe. These connections ensure that graduates would have excellent job prospects working in and with some of the most influential and prosperous countries in the world including: Argentina, Brazil, Canada, China, Columbia, France, Germany, Japan, Mexico, Spain, and the United Kingdom (<https://www.flchamber.com/international/global-florida/>).

From a local and state perspective this degree program provides for the Strategic Priority of Community and Business Engagement, by providing a pipe-line for future professional talent for public and private business, and community services. In addition, when viewed in light of FAU's success at attracting a diverse student population, this degree program is likely to bolster participation of underrepresented groups in the international/global professions in Florida. The core courses of the new major will integrate perspectives and pedagogical methodologies from various disciplines in the Humanities, Social Sciences, Geosciences, Education, and Economics in an effort to reconfigure traditional modes of teaching and working to prepare students for the challenges of the twenty-first century. The new degree will include mandatory experiential learning components in the curriculum, such as internships with local or global organizations and NGOs, as it is designed to provide an education that crosses the three orthogonal dimensions that serve to classify academic disciplines and delineate the structures of knowledge.

In sum, rather than preparing students to be specialists in a narrow field, the new major in Global studies is designed to build and foster the critical skills identified by major national educational frameworks as crucial for students to possess in order to be successful participants in tomorrow's global economy: problem solving, critical thinking, creativity and imagination, collaboration and teamwork, flexibility and adaptability, global and cultural awareness, civic literacy and citizenship, as well as oral and written communication skills ("13 Essential 21st Century Skills" <https://www.envisionexperience.com/blog/13-essential-21stcentury-skills-for-todays-students>).

The proposed degree addresses these questions directly. It embraces the shift from a strategic emphasis on "globalization" to one of "global competitiveness" by designing into the curriculum the exact skill sets needed to excel in today's competitive markets. The combination of targeted IFP courses, core courses, research and design courses and experiential courses ensures graduates will have the awareness of global and cultural trends as well as the training to put that knowledge into successful action.

B. If the occupations do not currently appear in the most recent version of the Search by CIP or SOC Employment Projections Data Tool provided by Board staff, provide occupational linkages or jobs graduates will be qualified to perform based on the training provided to students in the proposed program in the table below. Contact the institutional representative working with you on the degree proposal for more information about possible occupations.

Occupational Linkages for the Proposed Program

SOC Code (XX-XXXX)	Occupation Title	Source / Reason for Inclusion
11-9179	Personal Service Managers	Common job destination
13-1161	Market Research Analyst	Common job destination
19-2041	Environmental Specialist including health	Common job destination
19-4061	International Policy Specialist	Common job destination

C. Describe the student demand for the proposed program. The response should, at a minimum, include the following.

1. Projected headcount for Year 1 through Year 5.
2. Data that supports student interest or demand for the proposed program. Include questions asked, results, and other communications with prospective students.

We anticipate Year 1 headcount at approximately 20 students, rising steadily in measured steps till Year 5 where we expect approximately 63 students in the program.

Based on engagement with students we are confident there is robust demand for the proposed degree program. Students have persistently asked for degree options that are more workforce facing but that still allow them to concentrate their studies in various humanities or social science programs. Indeed, the impetus for the degree program were conversations that had taken place over many years with students culminating with a group of faculty creating a working group to take account of these concerns and to imagine a degree design that would enable students to resource courses from across the university but remain in programs that allowed for a unique focus in the fields represented by the College of Arts and Letters.

Based on our engagement with students we believe that sources of demand exist in several places. First, we believe there is a fair bit of demand from students currently in the institution that wish a slightly different major/career path. In particular we believe that students in the Colleges of Business, Education and Science would find the proposed major compelling. A degree in Global Studies offers a strong core in humanities and social science approaches to a similar range of professional options offered by these colleges but with the additional topical and area focus that many students would find compelling in giving them workforce opportunities.

We consider the two likeliest sources of demand to be students transferring in from the Florida College system and FTIC students who are seeking dynamic and flexible majors that allow for a range of interests to be combined in unique ways to best serve each student. For reasons we detail extensively throughout this proposal, we believe that the workforce demand associated with this degree as well as the wide array of electives and experiential learning requirements will make this a desirable degree that can be marketed successfully to today's student.

One telling measure of the amount of student interest related to these programs is the growth that similar programs have enjoyed in other SUS institutions. At the University of Florida, a similar degree program graduated 6 majors in 2012 and 90 majors 4 years later in 2016. UCF's program grew slightly more modestly from 1 major graduated in 2011 to 53 in 2016. UNF's program, the longest running in the state, has graduated an average of 30 students per year over the last decade.

FAU holds a unique position in that its relatively low-cost tuition allows access to a diverse student body. Roughly 27% of our students identify as Hispanic. Another 20% identify as African-American. A significant number of our students also have familial ties to the Caribbean and Latin America. A degree in Global Studies recognizes the existent diversity and internationalism that comprises our student body and builds upon it by formalizing many of the transnational links that many of our students already possess in a course of study that speaks to some of their life experiences. Students have shown an eagerness for such courses that build upon their knowledge base and build upon it.

Enrollment and workforce trend data from DATAUSA confirm a healthy demand for International Studies and Global Studies degrees, in part due to workforce demand and to higher than average starting salary range (<https://datausa.io/profile/cip/international-global-studies>). Geographically, the DATAUSA net shows that most "International Studies" programs tend to be located in the Midwest whereas "Global Studies" programs tend to be located in more coastal states. Because Global Studies degrees are often designed as interdisciplinary degrees this geographical siting indicates that the degrees are used to support activities beyond regional and national borders. Similarly, the proposed program at FAU aims to take advantage of our geographic location as a gateway to the Caribbean, Latin and South American and European regions drawing on the cosmopolitan nature of South Florida to connect within and beyond regions and nations.

FAU's College of Arts and Letters courses are heavily enrolled with students in our College of Business and College of Science as well as others. This existing pattern of student interest demonstrates interest in a degree that holistically integrates the various disciplines and methodologies represented by the Colleges.

IV. Duplication of Existing Programs

If the program duplicates another degree program at a private or public state university in Florida with a substantially similar curriculum, provide evidence that the university has investigated the potential impact on the existing program, has discussed opportunities for collaboration with the affected university, and can justify the need for duplication. Additionally, summarize the outcome(s) of communication with appropriate personnel (e.g., department chairs, program coordinators, deans) at the affected institutions regarding the potential impact on enrollment and any opportunities for collaboration in the areas of instruction and research.

Florida International University (FIU): FIU has a department of Global and Sociocultural Studies (GSS) that offers a variety of majors in Geography and Anthropology/Sociology. FIU offers two types of Global Studies courses: the first seek to internationalize a field of study (e.g. Sociology, Geography, Anthropology) while the second is a more interdisciplinary holistic degree (CIP 30:2001). These programs share an introductory course in global perspectives as well as a core set of courses that is not dissimilar to the proposed degree program. They each offer a set of courses in “theory” and “method” categories the students selects from and requires upper division courses in the area of study that contour the program to its title (e.g., upper division courses in Anthropology, Sociology, Geography or an Interdisciplinary set of courses). While there are numerous similarities to the proposed program the FIU degrees do not have the experiential learning aspect of the proposed degree in either its Study Abroad or the internship options. The proposed degree also requires an advanced course in Global Studies as well as a Directed Research Project.

The University of South Florida (USF): The School of Interdisciplinary Global Studies has three undergraduate programs: BA in Africana Studies (CIP 05:0201), BA in International Studies (CIP 45:0901), and BA in Political Science (CIP 45:1001). The most similar of these programs to the proposed degree is the “International Studies” BA, which is taught using almost exclusively Political Science courses – as opposed to a more general curriculum drawn from a number of disciplines. Similar to FIU, the USF programs allow for interdisciplinarity but do not require it, as the proposed degree does. In addition to also not requiring the experiential courses/internship, the degree’s focus is on studying the internationalization of a particular force (economics, politics, e.g.). University of Central Florida (UCF): UCF offers an in-person and online International and Global Studies major (CIP 30:2001) tied closely to its Political Science program and is primarily intended for students with occupational interest in related fields. Courses are almost exclusively drawn from Political Science. As with other programs listed it does not mandate interdisciplinarity, does not have dedicated courses on Global Studies comprising its core and does not require experiential courses.

Florida State University (FSU): FSU offers a major in International Affairs that allows students to draw broadly on courses across the university course offerings as well as allowing for departmental concentrations based on accrued credit hour (CIP 45:0901). The degree sets forth a number of requirements that are similar to the proposed degree including a core course in global study, an expectation that students would demonstrate “intermediate” level language proficiency and the ability to count internship credits toward the degree. However, there are significant differences in these requirements and other aspects of the degree. For example, the core course at FSU is more properly understood as a variant of a political science course (as opposed to the proposed degree’s set of core courses designed with interdisciplinarity). In the proposed degree, experiential credits (through study abroad or internship courses) is mandated rather than just allowed. Finally, the FSU degree requires at least 12 credits in one Department’s discipline. In addition to not requiring the same type of core courses as the proposed degree, then, the BA in International Affairs is more properly geared toward students with a disciplinary focus or interest in a regional study rather than one explicitly geared toward a global study. University of Florida (UF): UF offers an International Studies program (CIP 30:2001) conceived around regional specialization. Unlike the proposed program which would allow for, but not require regional specialization, UF’s BA in International Studies is designed for students that wish to concentrate interest in one of its five selected regional study areas rather than develop expertise in global study. The UF degree shares the goal of ensuring an “intermediate” level of language proficiency, but does not require experiential learning courses or an undergraduate research project.

University of North Florida (UNF): The University of North Florida offers a BA in International Studies (30:2001) that has a number of similarities but an equally significant number of differences from the proposed degree. The UNF program, for example, offers a very broad and interdisciplinary set of course offerings, but reserves those courses for the various specified “method” and “elective” degree requirement course options. The core of the degree is a set of courses firmly seated in Political Science. That core does not contain interdisciplinary courses designed for the major – as does the proposed degree. As well, like the proposed degree program, the UNF program requires experiential courses in either study abroad or internship courses. Unlike the proposed degree (which requires 6 credits) the UNF program requires 3 credits.

FAU’s proposed new degree does not replicate any of the existing programs and we do not envision it impacting their enrollment. In addition, the population density has grown significantly in South Florida creating further demand for such programs as student enrollment grows unlike many other universities across the country where it has plateaued or declined. When the pre-proposal was presented at the CAVP ACG meeting there were no objections to the creation of a B.A. in Global Studies at FAU.

Our market analysis has shown that the need exists for such a program if it is conceived as a competitive major with real-world experience mandated through the degree requirements.

- B. If the proposed program curriculum substantially duplicates an existing program at Florida Agricultural and Mechanical University, provide evidence that the proposed program would not affect enrollment in Florida Agricultural and Mechanical University's program.

The degree does not duplicate a program at FAMU, which offers a more focused and specialized program tailored to students interested in global and international security matters.

V. Curriculum

- A. If the program is a bachelor's degree, please identify if the university is seeking any of the following statuses for the program.

Status	Yes	No	If yes, complete the following
Common Prerequisites	X		Appendix C
Exception to 120 Credits		X	Appendix D
Specialized Admissions		X	Appendix E

- B. Describe the admissions criteria and graduation requirements for the program.

There are no admission criteria specific to the program. In order to graduate students must complete:

Three core disciplinary courses (IDS 3313 Global Studies I, 3 credits; IDS 4314 Global Studies II, 3 credits; IDS 4332 Cultural Study of Globality, 3 credits),

A course on research methods (FOL 3880 Research and Bibliographic Methods, 3 credits, or equivalent course),

A capstone course taken as a directed research project (IDS 4915 Directed Independent Research, 3 credits),

Two 3000-level or above experiential courses (study abroad courses or internship courses), 6 credits,

Five elective courses from four categories, three which must be from one category and one course each from two additional areas. No more than three 3000-level courses may be counted from any one academic unit or department, 15 credits, and

Two courses of "intermediate" level foreign language or above, 8 credits

C. If the proposed program is an AS-to-BS capstone, provide evidence that it adheres to the guidelines for such programs, as outlined in State Board of Education Rule 6A-10.024. List any prerequisites and identify the specific AS degrees that may transfer into the proposed program.

Not applicable to this program because it is not an AS-to-BS Capstone.

D. Describe the curricular framework for the proposed program in the table below.

Course Prefix & Number	Course Title	Required or Elective	Credit Hours	Course Description
IDS 3313	Global Studies I	Required	3	This course introduces students to interdisciplinary transnational methodologies in global studies. The course asks students to consider how global processes are implicated in our own lived experiences, and how our everyday practices are implicated in the social, cultural and political economies of the globe. Specifically, it considers how “the global” is narrated in ethnography and literature, favoring a critical engagement with how we study and consider the globe rather than an exhaustive catalogue of world issues in the era of globalization.
IDS 4314	Global Studies II	Required	3	This advanced study of global connectedness builds from foundations toward refined analytical capabilities in understanding contemporary articulations of globality as they are experienced in and across human affairs, movement, trade, relationships and the environment. The course showcases ways to bring interdisciplinary insights and methods to bear on these and other concerns related to an increasingly globalized world.

IDS 4332	Cultural Study of Globality	Required	3	This course offers students the basic tools that are needed to understand some of the core principles of cultural studies, which will assist students in negotiating, analyzing, and participating within the increasingly globalized cultures and practices of the twenty-first century. Cultural studies constitute an interdisciplinary endeavor that employs multiple methodological approaches and theoretical lenses in understanding the world.
FOL 3880	Research and Bibliographic Methods	Required	3	Teaches how to find and evaluate print, electronic and online scholarly sources and how to outline, write, edit, critique, revise and evaluate a research paper in literary studies or linguistics.
IDS 4915	Directed Independent	Required	3	This is an open-enrollment independent

	Research			study to be used to cover subject matter suitable for independent study but not currently offered by the various colleges.
XXX 3XXX	Study Abroad or Internship	Required	6	Varied per course
XXX 3XXX or 4XXX	Varied	Elective	15	Varied per course
XXX 2XXX	Intermediate Language	Required	8	Varied per course

Likely Electives

The proposed degree requires coursework in a number of elective categories. In an attempt to maintain a truly interdisciplinary degree, to ensure timely student access to courses and to allow students maximum flexibility in designing a degree plan that best suits their career goals we have included a substantial number of electives in each of these categories. The following is a sampling of electives likely to be chosen with some level of frequency, however it is worth noting that the nature of the degree makes it difficult to predict which electives courses will be selected most frequently. Some students may wish to concentrate their electives thematically on particular topics or specializations, which would naturally create densities within certain options that few other students may take, while others may feel drawn to selecting courses from a more diverse or unique array.

AMH 3630 American Environmental History (3 credits): History of the American Environment and the ways in which different cultural groups have perceived, used, managed, and conserved it, from colonial times to present.

ANT 4006 Human and Cultural Rights (3 credits): The course focuses on the definition of human and cultural rights by international bodies and cultural organizations. The starting point for the discussion is the UN Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The course explores how the declaration has been received, implemented, debated or ignored in cultures around the world.

ANT 4480 Global Health and Culture (3 credits): This course examines the historical interdependencies of, and the current issues related to, medical anthropology and global health. The objective of the course is to provide students an in-depth examination of the relationships of culture, health and illness from a global perspective. The course features perspectives from anthropologists as well as others working in the fields of global health and medicine.

EVR4112 Hazards, Climate, and People (3 credits): This course introduces the interaction between society and natural hazards with special consideration given to perceptions of risk, vulnerability, preparedness and recovery. Additionally, the course explores climate change and uncovers its role as related to the magnitude and frequency of certain hazards. This is an Academic Service Learning (ASL) course.

CPO 3761 Religions and World Politics (3 credits): This course will discuss the rise of religious movements worldwide and the impact of religious conflicts on world politics.

E. Does an industry or employer advisory council exist to provide input regarding curriculum development, student assessment, and academic workforce alignment?

Yes

No. Describe any plans to develop one or other plans to ensure academic workforce alignment.

Although there is not, at present, a constituted employer advisory council we are in the process of assembling such a collective at present and anticipate it will be in place by the end of the AY 2024-2025. As described previously, Global Studies is a career friendly degree insofar as its intentionally designed to deliver a holistic and interdisciplinary study that draws upon a variety of fields that platform student employment possibility. Graduates will have familiarity with: global affairs, finance, economics, sociological and demographic trends, geopolitical projections and health, human and environmental awareness. This broad array is, in turn, designed in relation to workforce data and employment projections that helped guide the construction of the program. In other words, the program was designed from scratch with industry and employment considerations at the forefront ensuring that the degree responds favorably to the labor market for many decades to come and beyond.

The BA in Global Studies offers program-wide focus in targeted knowledge sets as well as latitude to the learner's unique portfolio of desired academic specializations, skills acquisition, professional development and professional opportunities. The curriculum is directed and rigorous in keeping with the objective of producing students capable of engaging and succeeding in the complex present.

The interdisciplinary nature of this degree prepares students for a wide variety of career options, including work in Civil and Foreign Service (as National Security Agents, Consultants, Economists, Foreign Service Officers, Customs and Immigration Officers, and Legislative Aides). According to the Bureau of Labor and Statistics, the fields that such employment opportunities fall within are expected to grow approximately 7% from 2016 to 2026. Other career options include International Banking and Trade Officers, Pharmaceutical Representatives, Translation and Interpretation Services Providers, and International Pharmaceutical Representatives are anticipated to grow at roughly 5% from 2016 to 2026, while Translation. Interpretation specialist jobs are expected to grow 18%, and International Banking and Trade opportunities are likely to grow 19%. On the whole, the employment picture for candidates with this background is healthy, if not exceedingly robust.

- F. Explain how employer-driven or industry-driven competencies were identified and incorporated into the curriculum. Has a strategy been established for assessing student learning and reviewing academic workforce alignment to modify the curriculum as needed?

Workforce projections and skills in demand were evaluated against existing institution and College of Arts and Letters offerings in considering the need for such a degree. Reviewing fellow SUS institutions and similar programs throughout the country it was clear that by creating a broad, multi-disciplinary degree that focused on skills and experiences we could match the workforce demands for the near and long-range futures. Rather than constructing a degree purely around disciplinary competencies, the degree was built with an eye toward providing the types of knowledges and skill sets essential for workforce success in the 21st century. These include knowledge (recommended) of statistics and macroeconomics, as well as required intermediate foreign language proficiency. The degree also ensures that students are ready to compete in the workforce at a high level from the moment of graduation, if not sooner, by requiring 6 credit hours of experiential learning either in an internship or study abroad program. These experiences will provide students a wealth of real-world awareness and practice of the core proficiencies they will need entering the workforce.

Assessment of our program success will occur through the framework of a selected course, IDS 4915 Directed Independent Research which serves a similar role as "capstone" courses. This course will allow program faculty to determine the degree to which students have mastered the core knowledge and disciplinary components of the degree, their ability to draw insights from a variety of domains (e.g. technical, social, political, economic, etc), the way they match that abstracted information to more grounded and impactful conclusions guided by their experience and, finally, their ability to effectively communicate all of this in a coherent and meaningful way to a target audience. Faculty will routinely review these assessment objectives with a particular eye toward workforce demand and readiness goals.

At launch our baseline assessment practices will include the following assessments:

CONTENT/DISCIPLINE KNOWLEDGE AND SKILLS.

1. Declarative knowledge: Students will demonstrate knowledge of the history, theories or concepts related to interdisciplinary framework in global studies appropriate for the awarding of a baccalaureate degree. Students will demonstrate knowledge of the contemporary political, economic and social forces impacting global affairs. Skills related to declarative knowledge are usually assessed via in-class or standardized tests, typically in an objective (short answer) format.

2. Research skills: Students will demonstrate knowledge of the procedures involved in interdisciplinary research (e.g., idea generation, literature review, data collection, reporting) appropriate for the awarding of a baccalaureate degree. Students will demonstrate the ability to recourse and assess information sources from a variety of sources and cultural and geographic locations. These skills are assessed in the capstone research project.

COMMUNICATION SKILLS.

1. Written communication: Students will produce writing that is grammatically correct, well-organized, and properly formatted for the purpose of the assignment in the various disciplines at a level appropriate for the awarding of a baccalaureate degree. These skills are usually assessed via individual paper assignments or essays where instructors assess the quality of written expression.

2. Oral communication: Students will prepare and deliver informative and/or persuasive oral presentations that attend to the audience and are well-organized at a level appropriate for the awarding of a baccalaureate degree. These skills are usually assessed via individual oral presentations in a classroom setting, although sometimes instructors and/or supervisors may assess oral communication across time (e.g., during classroom discussions or at an internship site). 3. Other forms of communication: Students will prepare and present information or persuasive material using media that may or may not include written or oral communication at a level appropriate for the awarding of a baccalaureate degree. These skills are usually assessed via classroom projects, juried performances, or portfolios.

CRITICAL THINKING SKILLS.

1. Analytical skills: Students will analyze, evaluate, compare/contrast or judge theories, issues, events, or other content in an interdisciplinary fashion at a level appropriate for the awarding of a baccalaureate degree. These skills are usually assessed through examining the quality of argument in a student essay, oral presentation, or formal report.

2. Creative skills: Students will create a product by synthesizing knowledge from classes (e.g., develop a new theory or research proposal) at a level appropriate for the awarding of a baccalaureate degree. These skills are usually assessed by an instructor or supervisor examining a student product for the quality of its synthesis of current knowledge into a new product (e.g. capstone research project).

G. Does the proposed curriculum align with Section 1001.706 (5)(a), Florida Statutes?

- Yes
 No

H. For degree programs in medicine, nursing, and/or allied health sciences, identify the courses with the competencies necessary to meet the requirements in Section 1004.08, Florida Statutes.

For teacher preparation programs, identify the courses with the competencies required in Section 1004.04, Florida Statutes.

Not applicable to this program because the program is not a medicine, nursing, allied health sciences, or teacher preparation program.

I. Select the anticipated mode of delivery for the proposed program.

- Face-to-Face
 Hybrid
 Distance Learning

If the method(s) of delivery will require specialized services or additional financial support, describe the projected costs below.

It is anticipated that the courses will be delivered in face-to-face modalities although it is possible occasional portions of a class or a course in its entirety may be delivered in alternative modalities as needs warrant. There would be no need for specialized curricular delivery services that would entail additional financial burdens.

- J. Describe any potential impact on related academic programs or departments, such as an increased need for general education or common prerequisite courses or an increased need for required or elective courses outside of the proposed academic program. If the proposed program is a collaborative effort with another academic department(s), college(s), or school(s) within the institution, provide a letter(s) of support or MOU(s) from each department, college, or school in Appendix B.

No programs will be negatively impacted as all courses associated with the degree are either 1) offered already by the various departments of the College of Arts and Letters as part of their normal course offering, or 2) the core courses of the degree will be offered as electives in the departments of the faculty teaching them.

The core required courses in Global Studies and in Cultural Studies are designed, intentionally, to be interdisciplinary. This is not only in keeping with the central ethos of the degree as not beholden to any particular field's heuristic or methodologies but is also purposefully created toward ensuring that the burden of curricular delivery does not fall on any particular department or set of faculty. Dozens of faculty from across a significant number of departments within Arts and Letters could deliver the core course ensuring that no program or individuals are too strongly taxed.

We believe that the impact of the degree can only be positive: the degree is conceived in a way that easily allows for the acquisition of a second major since students can take up to three electives in one single department. Because the degree quickly exposes students to various disciplines through its core courses, students will discover they might be interested in a discipline they previously were unfamiliar with. Because it comprises 3 required core courses that are writing intensive, as well as a Research and Methods course and a capstone research project, the major prepares students to be excellent writers and help them acquire research skills.

The nature of the degree suggests the students may also be interested in acquiring additional certificates or minors that might complement their degree (e.g. Ethnic Studies, Asian Studies, Caribbean and Latin American Studies, Ethnic Law and Society, or Women Gender and Sexuality Studies certificates). We therefore anticipate an increase in students completing one or more of these certificate programs.

Similarly, the proposed degree's research course and capstone course/project requirements will likely create additional undergraduate research. We anticipate that this program will quickly become one of the targeted majors by FAU's Office of Undergraduate Research and Inquiry for promotion of research, publication in various venues and the granting of awards and grants.

It is also anticipated that students in this degree program would have substantial interest in Arts and Letters events and initiatives, particularly the Peace, Justice and Human Rights Initiative and the Americas Initiative. In creating the major we are not only providing students with in-demand workforce skills in a future looking area of employment we would be attracting additional enrollment and interest a wide array of College and University efforts.

K. Describe any currently available sites for internship and/or practicum experiences and any plans to seek additional sites in the next five years.

Not applicable to this program because students are not expected to seek internship or practicum opportunities as a required curriculum component.

It is anticipated that as the degree is launched we can expect to create additional partnerships through the internship requirement as well as a new platform through which donors may support our efforts and students. As we do to support all programs, we anticipate resourcing available grants or awards for students associated with the degree.

We are confident that we can deliver the experiential course requirements with existing resources/partnership capacity. While we anticipate this program creating new opportunities for internship partners, the College of Arts and Letters already enjoys a robust slate options for students, including those at:

American Red Cross – South Florida Region
Central Intelligence Agency
Congresswoman Lois Frankel’s Office
FAU Office of International Students & Scholars
FAU Office of Government Relations
FBI
Florida Immigrant Coalition
Hispanic Association of Colleges and University National Internship Program
U.S. Agency For International Development – Philippines
U.S. Department of Homeland Security – Immigration & Customs Enforcement
U.S. Department of State
U.S. Environmental Protection Agency
POC Capital Internship Program
U.S Secret Service
U.S. Department of Commerce – International Trade Development
The Spirit of Giving Network
The Puerto Rican Federal Affairs Administration, Office of the Governor of Puerto Rico
Peace Corps
The Washington Center for Internships
Virtual Foreign Service Internship Program

- L. Identify any established or planned educational sites where the program will be offered or administered. Provide a rationale if the proposed program will only be offered or administered at a site(s) other than the main campus.

The proposed major will be offered at FAU’s main campus at Boca Raton; however, requirements will include an experiential learning component that will almost certainly occur in off-campus environments (e.g. internships, study abroad experiences). FAU will not be expected to exercise control over these environments and there is no additional cost to the institution as any costs would be borne by the entities providing internship opportunities or the student seeking course-work through study abroad programs.

These experiential learning opportunities are crucial to the degree insofar as they provide workforce related and enhancement of employment skills, in the case of internships or 2) additional cultural awareness and fluency in out of country environments that could serve as the platform for research projects and future job prospects. The Florida Chamber Foundation report notes that nearly 50% of employers are somewhat concerned and 25% of employers are very concerned by the lack of preparedness and skills from today’s graduates. By ensuring that its graduates already matriculate with real-life experience and/or job skills acquired through internships our program design aims to close this skills gap.

- M. If the institution has conducted recent program reviews, received feedback from accreditation bodies, or received input from other entities that affect the proposed program, describe the institution's progress in implementing the recommendations.

If the proposed program is a doctoral-level program, include the external consultant's report and the institution's responses to the report as Appendix G.

*Faculty Code	Code Description	Source of Funding
A	Existing faculty on a regular line	Current Education & General Revenue
B	New faculty to be hired on a vacant line	Current Education & General Revenue
C	New faculty to be hired on a new line	New Education & General Revenue
D	Existing faculty hired on contracts/grants	Contracts/Grants
E	New faculty to be hired on contracts/grants	Contracts/Grants
F	Existing faculty on endowed lines	Philanthropy & Endowments
G	New faculty on endowed lines	Philanthropy & Endowments
H	Existing or new faculty teaching overload in addition to assigned course load	Enterprise Auxiliary Funds

- B. Provide specific evidence demonstrating that the academic unit(s) associated with the proposed program has been productive in teaching, research, and service. Such evidence may include trends over time for average course load, FTE productivity, student headcount in major or service courses, degrees granted, external funding attracted, and other indicators of excellence (e.g., thesis, dissertation, or research supervision).

In addition to other attributes that justify the selection of the program's core faculty (inherently interdisciplinary, a history of scholarship and program building in the area of study, e.g.), the respective members of the core faculty are highly productive and capable of delivering a high-quality degree program.

Each faculty member has at or above average peer unit evaluations of teaching. Each delivers the standard or minimally reduced course load, ensuring adequate availability for effective course scheduling particularly since the core courses in the program will also count for credit in the respective home departments of the faculty members. Most are currently and consistently involved in student committees that ensure student excellence (for example, research intensive undergraduate courses, honors in the major courses, or thesis and dissertation committees).

With regard to research, scholarship and creative work, all but two of the core faculty have demonstrated productivity through being tenured and promoted to at least the rank of Associate Professor. All have current and active scholarly agenda with recent and routine production of scholarship and creative works. Each of the core faculty scores in the highest or second highest category of annual evaluation with regard to scholarly production, a recognition of the volume and significance of their respective efforts. Collectively, the group represents nearly 10 books in press or under development, dozens of peer reviewed journal articles and book chapters and hundreds of scholarly and public presentations.

The core faculty are also significantly involved in service efforts that would elevate the profile of the proposed major. Many of the faculty serve in high-profile ways within their unit (Undergraduate Program Coordinator, Director of a unit-based certificate program, e.g) or serve as Directors in interdisciplinary certificates or student success programs (for example, FAU's nation-leader Diplomacy Program, a newly launched set of undergraduate and graduate Environmental Humanities certificates and minors, affiliation with the Peace, Justice and Human Rights program, e.g.).

Arts and Letters consistently sustains the highest FTE production in the university and services the broadest segment of the university population across its IFP and disciplinary courses, ensuring a wide array of elective options would be consistently available to students. As the degree is intended to target the most ambitious students, we have purposively selected core faculty involved in the program that are some of our most successful Faculty in the college. They are also consistently engaged in facilitating both student scholarship and maintaining high levels of scholarly productivity. We are confident our faculty are capable of delivering a quality degree program that provides students the essential skills and training essential for their future excellence and success in workforce endeavors.

VII. Estimate of Investment

- A. Provide the tuition rate for the proposed program for resident and non-resident students.

Resident/Credit Hour	Non-Resident/Credit Hour
$203.29	$721.84

If the proposed program will operate as self-supporting, market tuition rate, or establish differentiated graduate-level tuition, per Board of Governors Regulation 8.002, complete Appendix F, Self-Supporting & Market Rate Tuition.

- B. Complete the summary table below.

1. Provide projected costs and associated funding sources for Years 1 and 5 of program operation. Include all new costs that will be incurred as a direct result of the new program, such as new faculty and staff hires and graduate assistantships.
2. Provide headcount (HC) and full-time equivalent (FTE) estimates of student enrollment for Years 1 through 5.
3. Calculate an Educational and General (E&G) cost per FTE for Years 1 and 5 by dividing the total E&G by FTE. Undergraduate FTE must be calculated based on 30 credit hours per year. Graduate FTE must be calculated based on 24 credit hours per year.

Implementation Timeframe	HC	FTE	E&G Cost per FTE	E&G Funds	Contract & Grants Funds	Auxiliary/Philanthropy Funds	Total Cost
Year 1	20	15	$2,069	$31,040	$0.00	$0.00	$31,040
Year 2	33	25
Year 3	49	34
Year 4	58	39
Year 5	63	45	$690	$31,040	$0.00	$0.00	$31,040

VIII. Institutional Resources

A. Describe any additional library resources needed to implement and/or sustain the program through Year 5.

Not applicable to this program because no additional library resources are needed to implement or sustain the proposed program.

B. Describe any specialized equipment and space currently available to implement and/or sustain the proposed program through Year 5.

No specialized equipment is required to implement or sustain the program. The program will not require the allocation of any additional space.

C. Describe any additional specialized equipment or space needed to implement and/or sustain the program through Year 5. Include any projected Instruction and Research (I&R) costs of additional space. Costs for new construction should be provided in response to Section VIII.D. below.

Not applicable to this program because no new I&R costs are needed to implement or sustain the program through Year 5.

D. If a new capital expenditure for instructional or research space is required, indicate where this item appears on the university's fixed capital outlay priority list. If non-I&R costs, such as indirect costs affecting libraries and student services, are expected to increase due to the program, describe and estimate those expenses below. High enrollment programs, in particular, are expected to necessitate increased costs in non-I&R activities.

Not applicable to this program because no new capital expenditures are needed to implement or sustain the program through Year 5.

E. Describe any additional special categories of resources needed to operate the proposed program through Year 5, such as access to proprietary research facilities, specialized services, or extended travel.

Not applicable to this program because no additional special categories of resources are needed to implement or sustain the program through Year 5.

F. Describe fellowships, scholarships, and graduate assistantships to be allocated to the proposed program through Year 5.

Not applicable to this program because no fellowships, scholarships, and/or graduate assistantships will be allocated to the proposed program through Year 5

No fellowships or scholarships will be automatically designated to majors in the proposed degree. The College has a number of existing scholarships that would be available to students in the degree but these are competitive and open across the College and would not be targeted or designated to this degree program.

Among others, these scholarships include the Gurley Lorraine Sinkler Scholarship, the Richard Snyder Memorial Scholarship and the Latin American and Caribbean Scholarship. The College also intends to fundraise additional named scholarships upon the approval of the degree. In addition, there are a number of other applicable University-wide scholarships that candidates in this degree could apply for including those available through the Office of Undergraduate Research and Inquiry as well as a variety of university supported merit scholarships.

None of these potential sources are anticipated in Years 1-5.

IX. Required Appendices

Table 1 outlines the required appendices by degree level. Institutions may provide additional appendices to supplement the information provided in the proposal and list them in Table 2 below.

5. IDS 4915 Directed Independent Research, 3 credits;
6. Two 3000-level or above experiential courses (study abroad courses or internship courses), 6 credits
7. Five elective courses from four categories, three which must be from one category and one course each from two additional areas. No more than three 3000-level courses may be counted from any one academic unit or department, 15 credits;
8. Two courses of “intermediate” level foreign language or above, 8 credits

Students entering FAU as freshmen must meet the University’s General Education/four-year degree program requirements as listed in the Degree Requirements section of this catalog and the College’s requirements as set forth under Undergraduate Programs in the Dorothy F. Schmidt College of Arts and Letters. Students earning a BA in Global Studies are encouraged to select General Education courses in keeping with the nature of the degree. In Mathematics it is recommended students complete STA 2023 Introductory Statistics. In Social Science it is recommended students complete ECO 2013 Macroeconomics.

FAU has a foreign language requirement that all students pursuing majors within the Dorothy F. Schmidt College of Arts and Letters must fulfill for the B.A. degree. Students earning a BA in Global Studies must complete two language courses at the “intermediate” level or above. Students have met this requirement if they have passed or received credit for two semesters of one foreign language at the intermediate level one of Florida’s state colleges or at another college or university.

Prerequisite Coursework for Transfer Students

Students transferring to Florida Atlantic University must complete both lower-division requirements (including the requirements of the Intellectual Foundations Program) and requirements for the College and major. Lower-division requirements may be completed through the A.A. degree from any Florida public college, university or community college or through equivalent coursework at another regionally accredited institution. Before transferring and to ensure timely progress toward the baccalaureate degree, students must also complete the prerequisite courses for their major as outlined in the Transition Guides.

All courses not approved by the Florida Statewide Course Numbering System that will be used to satisfy requirements will be evaluated individually on the basis of content and will require a catalog course description and a copy of the syllabus for assessment.

General Library Description

<https://library.fau.edu>

The Florida Atlantic University Libraries provide library resources and services for students, faculty, staff, and the public at the Boca Raton, Jupiter, and Harbor Branch Oceanographic Institute campuses. The Wimberly Library at the Boca Raton campus is the largest and provides some centralized services for the partner campuses. The Wimberly Library also provides library services for the Boca Raton campus of Palm Beach State College. The Florida Atlantic University (FAU) Davie campus is a joint use campus with Broward College, and library services are provided by the University/College Library which is administered by Broward College. The FAU Fort Lauderdale campus is provided with library services by the Broward County Main Library. The FAU Libraries online resources are accessible to affiliated users from anywhere with an internet connection.

The student FTE at Florida Atlantic University is 26,869 (2019-2020).

Library Faculty and Staff

The current number of librarians at the FAU Libraries is 19 and the number of administrative and professional and other staff members is 47. Part-time student workers are employed in some departments, most notably Access Services and Interlibrary Loan. Librarians at FAU have faculty status and a promotion process. They do not have tenure.

Access Services

<https://library.fau.edu/access-services>

The Florida state university and college libraries recently (summer 2021) changed their library management system to Alma/Primo VE based on a legislative mandate. Primo VE provides access to the FAU Library Catalog (holdings of print and eBooks, government documents, maps, DVDs, streaming videos, etc.) as well as OneSearch, a discovery system that combines the holdings of many of the individual databases that the library subscribes to, along with the library catalog, and allows them to be searched together at one time. In addition, a Journals tab allows for individual journal titles to search for to determine which databases include the journal and what years are covered in our library. The Databases tab provides access to individual databases, which can be searched for or browsed by title or subject. Library research guides (LibGuides) provide guidance to users in selecting subject-appropriate databases (and other resources). Authentication to library-licensed resources requires users to log in with their FAUNet ID and password via OpenAthens.

<https://library.fau.edu/interlibrary-loan>

The Interlibrary Loan (ILL) Department obtains temporary loan of books (and other physical library materials) not owned (or in lost status) at FAU from other libraries, as well as obtaining copies of journal articles and book chapters. The latter are sent in PDF format, and ILL users are sent an email with a link that allows them access and download their requested online item(s). The ILL Department also handles intra-library borrowing and lending between FAU campus libraries. FAU affiliated users have reciprocal borrowing privileges with other state college and university libraries in Florida.

<https://libguides.fau.edu/textbooks-reserves>

To contribute towards state metrics and university KPIs (Key Performance Indicators) based on reducing student costs, the Libraries began offering textbook reserves a few years ago. The service places select required textbooks for courses on two hour reserve, for use in the library only. These are generally donated by faculty or students. The liaisons also do outreach to faculty to determine if any of their textbooks are available as eBooks with unlimited simultaneous users and to encourage the adoption of Open Educational Resources (OER). Select textbooks as eBooks have been and are being purchased from dedicated funds from Student Government.

Hi Bill,

Sociology has no objections to moving forward for degree approval.

I would, however, suggest that some change be made with respect to the Sociology courses included as electives.

SYP 2450 is listed as one of the electives. As far as I can see, this is the only one among those listed that is a lower division IFP course. I think Global Social Change (a 4000-level course not listed) would be a more suitable alternative. We also have Globalization and Cities and Globalization and Social Movements as 3000-level courses that would be appropriate for inclusion.

To:

- William Trapani <wtrapan1@fau.edu>

Bill,

The Department of Political Science did a thorough review of the program and our own degree program in this area. We spent a great deal of time thinking about where we want to be in this area. I appreciate your patience with us, and I apologize for delaying the approval process.

We ask that the department be removed from the Global Studies Degree. It is our intention to pursue and expand our existing Global Governance Concentration. By withdrawing from the new Global Studies Degree, we believe there will be clearer delineation between what we are doing and your new program.

We have no objection to Global Studies proceeding without our participation.

Again, I am sorry we caused a delay, and I will do what I can to support you as the program moves forward.

Best, Kevin

Advising

Metrics are difficult to provide here but my door is always open to any student, whether graduate or undergraduate. I do provide advising at both academic and professional levels. As means of assessment, I would say that the majority of my office hours is used for that purpose rather than to assist students from the courses I teach (although they are encouraged to come). I assess that 3 hours/week are utilized for that very purpose and I also write about 30 letters of recommendation on a yearly basis.
